STATE TO RECRUIT FARM LABOR WORK

Will Co-Operate In An Effort To Bring Farmers In Touch With Unemployed

Responsibilities for recruiting and placing labor to assist Georgia farmers during periods of peak crop production and harvesting are being transferred from the state Agricultural Extension Service to the Georgia State Employment Service January 1, according to Richard E. Smith, state supervisor of the farm labor program for the Extension Service.

The transfer is taking place on a national scale. Mr. Smith pointed out, and will occur in other states on the same date.

The Federal Extension Service accepted the responsibility, at the request of congress, when the Emergency Farm Labor program began operation in 1943.

To help Georgia's farmers during the war period, prisoners of war, foreign workers, migrant labor and local laborers were used, Mr. Smith continued. During 1945, 301,603 farm labor placements were made on farms in the state. Another feature of the program was the exchange of labor and equipment by farm neighbors in

Holiday Season Takes Tragic Toll

With a fatality record of seven human lives within a period of approximately thirty-six hours, tragedy was on the loose in Bulloch county during the holiday season. In a collision between two passenger cars on the Bethlehem church highway two miles from town around noon on Christmas day, five persons met deaths. On the Pembroke highway two miles from town on Friday evening at 6:30 two other lives were snapped out in a collision of a passenger car with a log truck headed toward town and said to have been lacking rear lights.

In the wreck first mentioned Mrs. Grady Wilson, age 43, in one car, and four negroes in another car were the victims. Mrs. Wilson was instantly killed and two of the negroes, while the other two negroes died shortly after reaching the hospital. These negroes were John Henry Hodge, 23; Sallie Mae Williams, 24; J. W. Williams, 21, and Robert Lewis, 20. Grady Wilson, who was driving with his wife, is yet in the hospital.

In the Friday evening tragedy the two victims were Mrs. Grady Lee, 38, and her seven-year-old son, Daniel Walton. Driving the car was Mr. Lee, who miraculously escaped injury when the car ran into the rear of a log truck headed toward Statesboro.

Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Lee, born in the same community in the Hagah district, were long-time friends and attended the same schools. Mrs. Wilson was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ben Franklin and Mrs. Lee was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Mooney. Mrs. Wilson, whose home was in Savannah, was on Christmas day visiting with relatives. Enroute with members of her family to the Wilson home at Graymont, the party planned to stop at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Deal, near the West Side school. Mrs. Deal, being a sister of Mrs. Deal. At a point on a slight curve the two cars came head-on together with results stated.

MRS. J. GRADY WILSON

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Statesboro Primitive Baptist church for Mrs. J. Grady Wilson, 43, one of the persons killed in a head-on collision near Statesboro on Christmas day. Services were conducted by Elders Pat Bird and Rollie Rhiner. Nephews of Mrs. Wilson served as pallbearers.

Mrs. Wilson is survived by her husband, who resides at 116 Park Row, Tattall Homes, Savannah, and who remains in Bulloch County Hospital with severe head injuries resulting from the collision; two daughters, Miss Mary Ellen Wilson and Miss Jo Ann Wilson, also patients at the hospital; five brothers, Walter M. Franklin, Savannah; George R. Franklin, Chicago, Ill.; Kenneth Franklin, California; and Lehman Franklin, Brooklyn, N. Y.; two sisters, Mrs. Carter Deal and Mrs. Jones Lane.

MRS. GRADY LEE AND DANIEL WALTON LEE

Funeral services for Mrs. Grady Lee, age 38, and her seven-year-old son, Daniel Walton Lee, were held Sunday at 1:30 o'clock at the Primitive Baptist church, with Elder V. F. Agan conducting the services. Burial was in East Side cemetery.

Besides her husband Mrs. Lee is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Mooney, Statesboro; four brothers, Jesse E. Mooney, Savannah; Arthur A. Mooney, Sylvania; Felton H. Mooney, Statesboro; and Ben S. Mooney Jr., Pooler; four sisters, Mrs. T. L. Cofer, Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. J. T. Lee, Atlanta; Mrs. Charles T. Wynn, Atlanta; and Mrs. T. L. Newcome, Statesboro.

Active pallbearers for Mrs. Lee were Joseph Cofer, Jesse E. Mooney Jr., Charles T. Wynn, Barney Rushing, Frank Lee and Frank Rushing. Pallbearers for Daniel Walton Lee were Emmett Alford Jr., Don Lee, Thomas Deal, and Billy Anderson. Barnes Funeral Home was in charge of funeral arrangements.

communities throughout the state.

Mr. Smith said that approximately 9,000 prisoners of war helped to harvest Georgia crops in 1945, the peak year, and also during this year 600 Bahamians were brought to Georgia to help during peak harvest seasons. Prisoners of war and Bahamians were used several years while the Emergency Farm Labor program was in operation to harvest peaches, peanuts and other crops.

VETERAN LAWYER TAKES VACATION

Albert Deal Visits Haunts Of His Youth Around Law College at Lexington, Va.

Congratulations are being extended by a host of friends to Col. Albert M. Deal, prominent local attorney, on his celebration of his eightieth birthday January 2nd. Among the many presents bestowed upon him perhaps the most unique and satisfying was a surprise trip to Lexington, Virginia, to visit once again the scenes of his college days at Washington & Lee University, from which tradition-hallowed institution Col. Deal graduated in law in 1896. Long aware of his long-cherished desire to re-visit the campus of his alma mater, Mr. and Mrs. William Deal, of LaGrange, left Statesboro with their father by automobile early Tuesday morning. They planned to reach Lexington Tuesday night, spend Wednesday at Washington & Lee, and return to Statesboro tonight.

Col. Deal is one of only three surviving members of his class of 1896. Possessed of a vibrant, forward-looking spirit not often associated with one of his years, he remarked to members of his family that his purpose in this trip was not only to seek out the remaining landmarks of his student days and experience the warm glow that wells from reminiscing on dear but long-forgotten friends and faculty members, but also to see for himself, and to rejoice over, the many evidences of progress and the brilliant future of service that lies ahead of one of the South's oldest and most distinguished colleges.

Those who know Albert Deal best well know that, despite his advanced age, he continues to look forward, not backward, and they are convinced that the new, modern Washington & Lee will bring him even more happiness and gratification than reminiscences of his alma mater of the past.

During the last five years, an average of 30 million pounds of pecans have been produced in Georgia annually. Yet this production is less than 15 pounds per bearing tree and there is much room for improvement in yields, horticulturists advise.

Gallon Choice Oysters Held Because of Dead Postoffice

In postal usage there is a term which describes that place to which mail is eventually sent which for any reason cannot be delivered to the party addressed. That all-inclusive term is "dead letter office." And that means that the letter is being put out of circulation because of the impossibility to deliver.

Now, in matters of general commerce—well, there may be an approximately fitting term with which we are not personally familiar; however, we have discovered a case which seems to us unique in that the post-office referred to in the shipping instructions had been out of existence for nearly a half century—therefore itself is a dead postoffice.

At a public place a few days ago we observed the busy little man who directs the deliveries from the local express office going here and there with a mysterious slip of paper in his hand and a worried look on his face. The question he asked, "Does anybody know where Star, Georgia, is?" And nobody knew for the very good reason that Star, Georgia, has been out of existence for well nigh a half century—and nobody knows what becomes of a postoffice when it ceases to exist.

So this reporter told the worried man about what he knew of what had once been Star, Georgia—but not now. The worried man displayed his notes which were to the effect that he held in storage at his place a gallon of oysters received for Christmas delivery by express to "R. L. Swetenberg, care C. T. Bowie, Star, Ga., via Statesboro."

To Our Friends:

To the thousands of our readers who so regularly during the years of the past have found us once each week snuggled in your mail boxes, we could wish no greater gift than that there shall come to you the joy in the days ahead that you have given us by your loyalty and friendship in all those years.

DRYS WIN A POINT WITHOUT BATTLE

Legal Sale of Beer Goes Out By Refusal of License By Authorized Officials

Quite suddenly Bulloch county drys were awakened to the fact that, in voting liquor out by a two-to-one majority recently, they had unconsciously won the battle against its kindred influence without a further battle of ballots.

Today the liquor and beer stores of Bulloch county are both closed under action of the law.

Up the street as we walked for our mail this morning there were displayed on the two liquor places along our route bright new padlocks. Somebody who knew, told us those were placed there by representatives of the federal revenue department Wednesday afternoon in the pursuance of the count of the election on December 10th. These padlocks, we were told, are only on the doors of the liquor establishments, and have been so placed all over the county.

As to the beer proposition, the latest development, which came sort of unexpectedly, follows the refusal of city and county boards to grant license for operation in future. It is explained that the recent county-wide election which went two-to-one against the sale of liquor, placed the county back under the laws which had operated immediately before the county voted wet. Under the law authority was vested in the boards of county commissioners and city councils to

MOTORISTS PAYING A LIBERAL SHARE

Gas Tax Cost For Average Car Placed at $292.50 Year Under Present Tax Law

Atlanta, Dec. 27.—The state and federal governments have collected $292.50 from the average Georgia motorist in taxes on the gasoline he has used in the automobile he now owns, according to M. M. Richardson, president of Georgia division, Travelers Protective Association.

Mr. Richardson based this figure on a recent survey made by the Crowell-Collier Publishing Company, New York, which found that the speedometers on cars in communities of over 2,500 population registered an average of 58,000 miles. The $292.50 figure does not include state automobile registration fees, it was pointed out.

The survey, according to Mr. Richardson, shows that the average car is a 1940 model. "But," he explained, "this in no way means that new car purchasers are stepping into a bright, shiny vehicle that is unencumbered by taxes. At present rates of taxation the new car purchaser has to pay out $74.65 in special taxes before he can shift gears. Of this amount, $70 represents the average excise tax paid to the federal government, tires and tubes account for another $4.50 in taxes and the state charges an average of $2.87 to register it.

"That's only the beginning, however," Mr. Richardson continued. "The minute the new car owner purchases his first gasoline he starts paying more taxes—six cents to the state on every gallon and one and a half cents to the federal government. The average Georgia motorist consumes 760 gallons of gasoline in a year's time which cost him $57.00 in taxes. This brings the total automotive tax bill to $134.42 in the first year of operation.

"Despite the fact that the older models have a head start of more than twice the distance around the world," Mr. Richardson concluded, "it shouldn't take the new buggies long to catch up with their elders—at any rate, as far as taxes are concerned."

Produce Penicillin Without Using Mold

New Types Also Developed by Modern Process.

NEW YORK—The first synthetic penicillin, an achievement making possible entirely new types of this potent drug, was announced in Science, Journal of the American Medical Association for the Advancement of Science.

The artificial drug, an important fundamental advance in penicillin research, was developed by Drs. Vincent du Vigneaud, Frederick H. Carpenter, Robert W. Holley, Arthur H. Livermore and Julian R. Rachele of Cornell university medical college at the New York hospital-Cornell medical center.

By chemical methods they produced Penicillin G—one of the main kinds of penicillin—which is exactly the same as natural penicillin grown by a mold. It is just as potent as natural Penicillin G, the type which appears to be most effective in the human body.

This achievement "opens the way to the synthesis of a series of entirely new and different penicillins which might be useful against diseases not affected by present kinds of penicillin," Dr. Du Vigneaud said. He explained that more changes could be made in the penicillin molecule's structure by the synthetic method than by the mold.

Only tiny amounts of synthetic penicillin have been made so far, he said, and much development would be needed before the synthetic process could be used to produce penicillin in greater or cheaper quantities than by mold growth. Besides providing that penicillin could be made synthetically and in new forms, the research possibly might lead to a clearer picture of the structure of penicillin, which is not yet fully known. Just how the jigsaw of chemical parts fits together in the synthetic process is not yet completely determined. When this mystery is solved, the search for different and possibly more effective penicillins can be speeded up, Dr. Du Vigneaud said.

AAF Weather Central

Gets Varied Queries

WASHINGTON.—A pilot concerned with weather conditions for a planned cross-country flight, an officer arranging a week-end trip, or a soldier debating whether to wear a newly pressed uniform are typical of the military personnel who look to "Weather Central" of the U. S. air forces in Europe for the answer to their official and personal queries about weather.

It's all in a day's work for USAFE Weather Central to furnish accurate weather forecasts to scores of pilots clearing over dozens of air routes, brief the commanding general and his staff on weather conditions, supply data to the Stars and Stripes and the American Forces overseas radio network, transmit meteorological information by radio and teletype, or even answer Mrs. Jones' query about the advisability of wearing a raincoat to the commissary. Weather Central is located at Wiesbaden, Germany, air base, a few miles from USAFE headquarters.

Since weather information for aerial flights must cover a wide area, accurate reports from as far west as the Mississippi river and as far east as Siberia are available at Weather Central.

New Chemical Found Which

Spots Presence of Monoxide

WASHINGTON.—Government scientists have developed a chemical detective which may arrest the homicidal activities of carbon monoxide, the odorless gas which killed 1,754 persons in 1945 alone.

National bureau of standards described its detective as a device smaller than a lead pencil which can spot less than one part of carbon monoxide in 500,000,000 parts of air.

The bureau said its device, "a colorimetric gel," can test a given air sample in about a minute. Its sensitivity to carbon monoxide is "more than 100 times greater than that attained by former chemical indicators."

Scientists of the bureau's gas chemistry section began searching for a good detector in wartime. It was needed to save lives in aircraft, tanks, P.T. boats, landing craft, gun turrets, and aircraft carriers.

Because the gas has no smell and produces no warning symptoms before it is too late, it annually kills hundreds of persons in automobiles, closed rooms with defective heating equipment, garages, kitchens, furnace rooms, factories, mines and quarries.

94-Year-Old Woman Is Almost Too Late for Boat
SAN FRANCISCO.—Said the 94-year-old woman, smiling sweetly at jewelry salesman Frank McAuliffe: "I'd like to pick up that silver gravy boat I left here to be cleaned."

Said McAuliffe: "When did you leave it?"

She answered, "In 1902."

McAuliffe found it, too—in the basement.
